BACKGROUND - 2005 LEGISLATIVE SESSION Background

In 2005 the Legislative Assembly contracted with one employment contractor to provide secretarial services, telephone message services, and bill and journal room services.

Secretarial Services

The contractor prepared correspondence and envelopes, news releases, and other miscellaneous documents, e.g., written testimony presented by legislators to committees. The contractor's employees were assigned work without regard to the political affiliation of the requester. For example, no employee was assigned to do work solely for the majority party or solely for the minority party.

During the 2005 session, the contractor's employees produced a variety of documents, which included 295 letters (643 copies), 65 merge mailings (6,150 copies), 154 floor speeches (598 copies), 106 news releases (358 copies), 29 charts and lists (217 copies), and 6,300 miscellaneous documents - labels, etc. (6,891 copies). The secretarial service also made the number of photocopies as indicated.

During the 2005 session, the contractor provided four secretarial services employees, one of whom was an onsite supervisor.

Telephone Message Services

The same employment contractor staffed a telephone message center through which North Dakota residents used toll-free incoming wide area telephone service (WATS) lines to obtain information about pending legislative proposals and to leave messages for their senators and representatives. In addition, materials faxed to the Legislative Assembly are received in the telephone room, are sorted, and are delivered to the appropriate individuals in the legislative chambers. Telephone calls are rotated to an available attendant or to the next available attendant on a basis that attempts to equalize the calls received by each attendant. Rather than a busy signal if all attendants are busy with calls, voice mail instruction gives the caller an option to wait until the next available attendant or to leave a voice mail message. Calls received afterhours are routed to voice mail, and these messages are handled the next business day by the first attendant on duty.

Telephone attendants usually receive two types of calls--either seeking information or leaving a message. If a caller asks for information on whether a bill on a particular subject has been introduced or on the status of a specific bill, the telephone attendant accesses the computerized bill status system through that attendant's personal computer and either uses the subject index to review the subject matter of bills introduced or accesses the bill by number to determine the current status of that proposal. The attendant then gives the information to the caller. If the caller asks to leave a message for a legislator (by policy a caller may leave a message only for that caller's senator and two representatives of the district in which that caller resides), the attendant determines who the caller's legislators are (if the caller does not know), accesses the computerized message system (LAWS), and enters the caller's name, address, telephone number, e-mail address, the specific bill number for the message, and the message. The legislator then receives this information on the legislator's personal computer. If a message is for a legislator who does not use a personal computer, the telephone attendant completes a message form and an employee of the secretarial service delivers the message to the legislator. During the 2005 session, 137 of the 141 legislators used personal computers.

The number of calls has gone down each session since 1993--62,320 calls were received in 1993; 41,668 in 1995; 28,433 in 1997; 22,491 in 1999; 16,028 in 2001; 10,021 in 2003; and 6,282 in 2005. It is unknown whether the number of calls will continue to decrease each session. Factors that may influence the number of calls include increased use of e-mail to contact legislators, increased use of information available from the legislative branch web site, and the extent of public interest in legislative issues.

The telephone message service also processes e-mails by which e-mail messages to legislators are added to the constituent views feature of the LAWS system.

The fax machine for the Legislative Assembly is located in the telephone message service area and the telephone message services personnel sort fax messages and deliver them to legislators as appropriate.

During the 2005 session, the contractor provided five telephone message services employees.

Bill and Journal Room Services

The same employment contractor also staffed and operated the bill and journal room, which is located on the ground floor in the legislative wing of the State Capitol. Bill and journal room personnel are responsible for receiving copies of bills, resolutions, journals, daily calendars, weekly committee hearing schedules, and daily bill status reports from the printers. The personnel sort and place the copies of bills, resolutions, and journals on shelves; deliver copies of bills, resolutions, journals, daily calendars, weekly committee hearing schedules, and daily bill status reports to the Legislative Council office; hand out copies of bills, resolutions, journals, daily calendars, and committee hearing schedules to individuals who request these items at the "walkup" windows in the bill and journal room; hand out calendars and hearing schedules on request; receive subscription fees for transmittal to the Legislative Council office and maintain a list of subscribers to sets of bills and resolutions, journals, the journal index, calendars, committee hearing schedules, and bill status reports; maintain "boxes" in the bill and journal room for distribution of bills, resolutions, journals, calendars, committee hearing schedules, and bill status reports to entities that have subscribed to those materials or reserved those boxes for receipt of those materials; mail copies of bills, resolutions, journals, calendars, committee hearing schedules, and bill status reports to those entities that have subscribed to receive sets of those items by mail, and to any other entities who request individual copies of those items by mail; and assemble a set of bills and resolutions and a set of journals for each legislator who has a personal computer and requests a set of bills, resolutions, and journals upon adjournment of the Legislative Assembly. The Legislative Assembly pays the postage costs for documents mailed by the bill and journal room personnel.

Total work product or service information is unknown, but in 2005, 73 entities subscribed to pick up 167 sets of bills and resolutions as available, and two subscribed to receive the set by mail (bills and resolutions are introduced daily during the first three weeks of session and on a very limited basis thereafter, journals are printed on a daily basis, and bill status reports are printed on a daily basis); 48 entities subscribed to pick up the daily journals, and one subscribed to receive them by mail; one entity subscribed to receive daily calendars by mail; one entity subscribed to receive weekly committee hearing schedules by mail; five entities subscribed to pick up a daily bill status report, and one to receive the report by mail. Also, the Legislative Council office received 15 sets of bills and resolutions, 22 sets of daily journals, and 16 sets of daily calendars, and 14 sets of weekly committee hearing schedules. State agencies are not required to pay for these documents but can reserve a "box" to receive copies that are placed in the box by bill and journal room personnel. Subscribers who pick up their documents also have reserved a "box" to receive the copies. In 2005, 73 entities (private subscribers and state agencies) had boxes for receipt of one or more copies of the materials.

During the 2005 session, the contractor provided three bill and journal room services employees, one of whom was an onsite supervisor.

2005 Contract Price

Although the 2005 contract was to provide secretarial, telephone message, and bill and journal room services through 12 employees for 76 days at $1,044.48 per day, the contractor used flexible work scheduling, reduced the number of employees to reflect actual workload, and billed only for actual costs incurred at an average cost of $991.79 per day for 76 days.

GENERAL SPECIFICATIONS

The successful bidder must provide personnel necessary to perform secretarial services, telephone message services, and bill and journal room services required by the House of Representatives and the Senate of the 60th Legislative Assembly similar to that provided during the 2005 session.

Except for bill and journal room services, the period of the contract is from the first day of the 2007 regular session (January 3, 2007) through the last day of the legislative session (unknown, but probably in mid-April). With respect to bill and journal room services, the period of the contract is from the first day that bills are delivered to the bill and journal room (approximately December 11, 2006) through the last day of the legislative session and includes one day after the last day of the session as necessary to package and mail to legislators and subscribers the journal of the last day of the session and to compile a set of the daily journals for each legislator with a personal computer who requests a set of the printed daily journals (these sets may be compiled during the session as time permits--only three sets were requested during the 2005 session). The Legislative Assembly meets in session Monday through Friday, with the possibility of meeting in session on a few Saturdays. The Legislative Assembly may be in session on Martin Luther King, Jr., Day, George Washington's Birthday, and Good Friday. The Legislative Assembly is scheduled for a recess from Saturday through Tuesday, February 17-20, 2007.

The Legislative Assembly is responsible for paying any overtime required under state or federal law if the Legislative Assembly meets on a Saturday or Sunday. Otherwise, the contractor is responsible for overtime required to complete projects on a timely basis.

This bid proposal is for eight employees--five employees and the onsite supervisor in the secretarial and message services area and two employees in the bill and journal room area. Of the five employees and one onsite supervisor in the secretarial and telephone message services area, all six should be able (and will receive the training) to provide telephone message services and three employees and the onsite supervisor should also be able (and will receive the training) to provide secretarial services. During the first three weeks of the session, the contractor should be prepared to assign one of the two employees primarily responsible for telephone message services to the bill and journal room area, as workload requires.

The contractor is responsible for the discipline or the dismissal of any employee. The chairman of the House and Senate Employment Committees may discuss with the contractor the discipline or dismissal of any employee.

Employees of the contractor will be working with confidential information and are required to sign a nondisclosure agreement. The contractor must enforce this agreement and terminate an employee who violates the nondisclosure agreement.

The contractor must provide:

1. Continuous monitoring of the performance of employees and provide a replacement if a current employee does not perform as required.
